Any other thoughts about this play?	at the 6 sec mark you see the defensive player with both feet on the ground facing the offense and the defender having the opportunity to go around the player. C should have had the charge as well. I know David Hall though	2/16/2009

	and am not surprised by him taking it and then giving out the T's

Any other thoughts about this play?	A triple whistle is possible for this play, it is Center's or Trail's primary area. Seemed like there were many players in between the two officials, making eye contact difficult. If both officials signaled opposing calls. The high school rule is both players are charged a foul and play	2/16/2009 resumes at the point of interruption.

Any other thoughts about this play?	Although the wrong call was made that doesn't give the coach the right to run on the court and act the way he did. He had the right to be upset but he put himself in a situation that the officials had to give him a (T).	2/16/2009

Any other thoughts about this play?	I never saw the C signal block, but sure looked like he was going to call one. Had they both signaled, then we would have had a double foul and point of interruption scenario (at least in our book). Should have been the C's call all the way.	2/16/2009

Any other thoughts about this play?	Legal guarding position was obtained when two feet on the floor facing the offensive player. Defense was there b4 offense left floor and may have moved laterally, which is allowed. Time and distance are NOT factors on an opponent with the ball. Charge.	2/16/2009

Any other thoughts about this play?	The first question asked is the best one. Which official makes the call. The play started in the C's primary. The C should make the call. However, it is a close call and at least the C held their signal and no "blarge" was called.	2/16/2009

Any other thoughts about this play?	Could have gone either way. L was too quick to call the charge considering the play was coming from C's primary, taking away the option of discussing the call. You have to give coach a lot of leeway as a result, but not a chest-bump at center court. Pre-game: L should pause in this situation. You gotta love all the fan comments on Rivals about feet being set, and that it was such an obvious, easy call to make in real time.	2/16/2009

Any other thoughts about this play?	Initially I would have called the block, but since we have a block/charge called I believe it should be double foul go to possession. The coach was completely out of order and should have received the T and subsequent toss because he was relentlessly persuing the refs all over the court	2/16/2009

Any other thoughts about this play?	This is precicely why we emphasize, in a 3-person crew, that the Lead should have patience in this situation. Center has a great look from a good angle; Lead is somewhat straight-lined!	2/16/2009

Any other thoughts about this play?	The C had something. But I never saw him, actually make a call. The commentator, coach & player reacted as if he called a block or looking for him to override the L. I didn't agree with call, however Coach Floyd behavior was horrendous. He should be suspended.	2/16/2009

Any other thoughts about this play?	The defender, before the dribbler went airborne, obtained legal guarding position by getting two feet on the ground with his torso facing the dribbler. The dribbler then contacts the defender square in the torso. The defender	2/16/2009

	did not do anything wrong as he was not moving into the dribbler at the time of contact. While this play was a close one, and calling a block would be understandable, the correct call IMO is the player control foul.

Any other thoughts about this play?	The lead official is nearly screened, and had a lot of players/action in his court coverage at the time. Although the charge/block contact happened in the opposite corner of the lead official's zone, he should hold off his charge motion until the double whistle is resolved. Getting caught up in the crowd, and the home team momentum-switch can at times corrupt officials' judgment. Making the flashy (motion-wise) call for the home crowd can only be done when it is obviously the correct call. Its good to be firm and quick with calls, but a communicative team of officials is something with which you have to balance those confident, swift calls. On questionable calls that you might have been screened on, have the awareness to quickly think that another official, in this case the center official, could have a better angle at the play.	2/16/2009

Any other thoughts about this play?	The toss had to occur but you can say they set the coach up for failure. If they would have communicated since it was a double whistle, then maybe Floyd would have calmed down. I believe Coach Floyd should have been T'd for running on the court but let's look at the situation before you toss since it was caused by a call issue that was bad....Pre-game should have addressed communicating and not making the immediate call on block-charge. Also, C should have run straight to L to show him he had a whistle as well....	2/16/2009

Any other thoughts about this play?	I think that it was dual area coverage but, I think that the lead official made an incorrect call on the play. The T was justified when the coach ran on the court. The coach should have called a time out and approached the official in a professional manner. The way the coach stormed the court, I think the officials had no choice to eject him even if the call was the correct one or not.	2/17/2009

Any other thoughts about this play?	A good pre-game like I heard from our beloved Mr. Anders earlier this year could have solved this delimma. Had the two officials looked at each other first (knowing there was a double-whistle) and came together this wouldn't have happened. I think a TECH is justified because the coach should never come out onto a floor like that after an official. However, cooler heads could have prevented the toss.	2/17/2009
